Wheat for Eastern Mills

So that flour mills in the East and So that flour milks in the East and Central states may receive their normal quantities of wheat during the coming winter, the United States food administration has taken active measures to insure the transportation of the grain from the West. In a statement issued yesterday by James F. Hell, chairman of the milling division of the food administration, announcement was made of the intention of the food administration to ship all possible supplies to the East by way of the Great Lakes, so long as navigation remains open.
